

The Teacher Led Development Work (TLDW) programme

Recruiting new tutors for 2017-18

Supporting practice development in schools

This transformational programme supports all educators, no matter what their role or job title, to improve the quality of teaching and learning by designing and leading development projects in their settings. Successful participation over one academic year leads to the award of the Certificate in Teacher Leadership.

The programme is led by tutors, who are typically experienced teachers with responsibility for areas such as teaching and learning or CPD in their settings. Tutors facilitate a series of school-based workshops and access to network events with the purpose of enabling participants to design and lead development work.

Support for tutors is provided through an induction conference, resources, visits, tutor conferences throughout the year and membership of the TLDW tutor team and HertsCam Network.

A school or a group of schools can create a TLDW group with one or more tutors supporting participants from one or more schools.

If you want to enable colleagues within your school to become more effective change agents then this programme is for you.

The TLDW Programme is part of the HertsCam Network, dedicated to building professional knowledge through dissemination, critical discussion and collaboration. This has an international dimension through sister networks in more than 15 countries.

Views from current TLDW groups

*Thought provoking, liberating, challenging.
Makes you think outside
your comfort zone, supportive.*

I felt I didn't know much but TLDW made me realise I did have something to say. I have found my voice. Now I can have important professional discussions with people.
